scribes an ingenious method by which the Africans obtain water in the desert: "The women tie a bunch of grass to one 150 00 end of a reed, about two feet long, and insert 75 00 it in a hole dug as deep as the arm will reach; then ram down the wet sand firmly around it. Applying the mouth to the free end of the reed, they form a vacuum in the grass beneath, in which the water collects, and in a short time rises to the mouth. It will be perceived that this simple, but truly philosophical and effectual method, might have been applied in many cases, in different countries where water was greatly needed, to the the HAVANA PLAN .- Grand Consolida saving of life. It seems wonderful that it should have been now first made known to the world, and that it should have been habitually practised in Africa, probably for eenturies. It seems worthy of being particularly noticed, that it may no longer be neglected from ignorance. It may be highly important to travellers on our western deserts and prairies, in some parts of which water is known to exist below the surface."
